

Paralegal Practice Task Force

Final Report

January 2004

Paralegal Practice Task Force EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The State Bar of Wisconsin recommends that the Supreme Court, as part of its constitutional authority in Article VII over the administration of all courts and its inherent authority over the practice of law, regulate those individuals who would use the occupational title of “Paralegal”. The recommendations are drafted as Supreme Court Rules in six specific areas:

- Definition: A paralegal would work under the supervision of an attorney, and would perform services which, absent the attorney, would be performed by the lawyer.
- Education and Training: A paralegal would be required to attend and receive 18 semester credits of course work from a qualified paralegal studies program. An attorney, receiving the proper coursework could work as a paralegal.
- Licensure Based on Experience: A three-year window would be provided for individuals who are currently providing the services of a paralegal to apply for licensure if they obtain at least three credits of continuing paralegal education in ethics and if they provide documentation from a supervising attorney that they have performed paralegal services for no less than 4,800 hours any time during the past 5 years.
- Continuing Education Requirement: A paralegal would be required to complete at least 10 hours of continuing paralegal education during each 2-year reporting period.
- Ineligibility: An individual would be ineligible to be licensed as a paralegal if his or her license to practice law had been revoked or suspended; if he or she had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude; or if he or she lacks good moral character.
- Rules of Ethics: A paralegal would be held to a set of ethical rules fashioned after those standards regulating attorneys under Supreme Court Rule 20. The ethics rules have been drafted jointly by the State Bar Paralegal Task Force and the State Bar Ethics Committee.

INTRODUCTION

In August 1995, the American Bar Association's Commission on Nonlawyer Practice issued its report, Nonlawyer Activity in Law-Related Situations. This report followed hearings held in 1992, 1993 and 1994 at which nearly 400 persons offered testimony and over 2,000 documents were reviewed. The report amply demonstrated that nonlawyers provide services which in many instances are related to the practice of law. Furthermore, the factual findings demonstrated that nonlawyers, both as paralegals who are accountable to lawyers and in other roles, have become an important part of the delivery of legal services. Six recommendations were formulated as a result of the Commission's work. One of the recommendations urged expansion of the range of activities of traditional paralegals, with lawyers remaining accountable for the paralegal activities (Recommendation 2).

Concurrently, the National Federation of Paralegal Associations (NFPA), the National Association of Legal Assistants (NALA) and the American Association for Paralegal Education (AAfPE) also addressed concerns relating to the definition of the terms "paralegal" and "legal assistant." These organizations also addressed themselves to the establishment of standards for education, ethics, professionalism, and to the expanded role of skilled paralegals in the delivery of legal services.

In May 1996, the State Bar of Wisconsin's Commission on the Delivery of Legal Services, which was commissioned in September 1994, issued its report and findings, following hearings held around the State of Wisconsin in August 1995. The mission of this commission was to explore and make recommendations to increase the availability of legal services to low and moderate-income persons in Wisconsin, specifically those who did not qualify for publicly financed legal services. One of the 14 recommendations of the Commission (Recommendation 7) was for the State Bar to develop guidelines for expanding the range of activities traditionally performed by paralegals, with lawyers remaining accountable for the paralegal's activities.

The State Bar of Wisconsin Paralegal Practice Task Force (Task Force) was created both to address concerns expressed over unmet legal needs, and to pursue the Commission's recommendations that better utilization of paralegals will help meet some of the legal needs that presently go unserved.

The Task Force also gave consideration to the concerns of state and national paralegal groups over the professionalism of a paralegal career, given the fact that there are no current standards or requirements for those who choose to call themselves paralegals. The Paralegal Association of Wisconsin began addressing these issues in 1995, when steps were taken to develop legislation that would require paralegal licensure through the Wisconsin Department of Regulation and Licensing. Further discussions with members of the State Bar of Wisconsin, the Board of Attorneys of Professional Responsibility and the Board of Bar Examiners indicated a need to approach regulation which would be overseen by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, while at the same time allowing for cooperative input from paralegals regarding any form of licensing or regulation. The Task Force then drew together the talents and resources of attorneys, paralegals associated with the Paralegal Association of Wisconsin, the Madison Area Paralegal Association, and paralegal educators. Additionally, there are adjunct members who brought to the Task Force their expertise in their particular areas, such as the Board of Bar Examiners, the Board of Attorneys of Professional Responsibility and the State Bar

Board of Governors.

In July 1996 the Task Force met to begin the process of determining the issues surrounding paralegal practice. The Task Force identified several topics for discussion, which included attorney accountability vs. direct supervision, duties of legal secretaries vs. paralegals, interest in licensure and testing, threat to the practice of law, pro bono activities of paralegals, retroactive and/or grandfathering of practicing paralegals, educational criteria and requirements for continuing legal education and legal ethics. Additionally, the Task Force has addressed the issues of paralegal accountability for legal malpractice and professional responsibility.

Over the course of the last 7 1/2 years the Task Force has committed itself to addressing the issues and concerns of paralegal licensure and increased utilization of paralegals in the delivery of legal services.

The Task Force now has accomplished the following: (1) created a definition of paralegal; (2) adapted provisions of SCR 20 to apply to paralegals; (3) created a grandfathering provision for practicing paralegals; (4) created guidelines for educational requirements of future paralegals; (4) drafted a Code of Ethics for paralegals; (5) drafted a Paralegal Oath.

The intent of the Task Force is to establish criteria for the licensure of paralegals in Wisconsin so as to establish recognized standards of training, education and qualifications that will assure attorneys, consumers and the courts that the persons providing paralegal services in the State of Wisconsin have achieved a level of ability that can be measured and recognized.

SCR __.01 Paralegal: Definition and Regulation

(1) "Paralegal" means an individual qualified through education and training, employed or retained to perform substantive legal work and supervised by an attorney licensed to practice law in this state, requiring a sufficient knowledge of legal concepts that, absent the paralegal, the attorney would perform the work.

(2) No individual shall utilize the title "paralegal" in this state unless that individual is licensed under this chapter.

DEFINITION

A "Paralegal" is an individual qualified through education and training, employed or retained to perform substantive legal work and supervised by a lawyer licensed to practice law in this state requiring a sufficient knowledge of legal concepts that, absent the Paralegal, the attorney would perform the work.(1)

The Task Force also adopted the following footnote regarding "grandfathering" Paralegals with work experience as part of the definition:

- (1) We presume a "grandfather clause" for qualification by work experience. All the members of the Task Force agreed that work experience could be deleted from the list of qualifications so long as any ultimate program implemented as the result of the work of this Task Force would provide a "grandfather clause" for those "Paralegals" already working in the field.

(See SCR __ .03, which contains the "grandfather" clause pertaining to work experience.)

COMMENTARY

At one of the first meetings of the Paralegal Task Force, it became obvious that to go forward the Task Force first had to define the term "Paralegal".

As a commencing point, the Task Force members reviewed the American Bar Association's (ABA) latest definition of the term "Legal Assistant". Some changes were suggested for use in the State of Wisconsin. Each Task Force member was asked to study this definition and prepare his or her own and return it to the chairperson for redistribution to all Task Force members. A "definition" committee then was appointed to assimilate this and other input and to draft a definition for use in Wisconsin.

Early in the committee's work, it was noted that the terms "Paralegal" and "Legal Assistant" often, but not invariably, are treated as synonyms. The ABA chose to define the term "Legal Assistant" rather than selecting the term "Paralegal". All of the Paralegals on the committee took the position that the proper term and definition that they sought was for "Paralegal". They pointed out that at many offices where they worked, "Paralegal" was the term given to the most qualified member of the staff, followed by Legal Assistant, Legal Secretary, Secretary and Receptionist.

As an example of the trend to acknowledge the evolution of the profession, a local professional organization, the Madison Area Legal Assistant Association elected to change its name to the Madison Area Paralegal Association. It was also pointed out that the State of Wisconsin had recently completed a survey to create professional-level position specifications for state employees performing legal support activities and had adopted the term "paralegal". Employees in these positions had previously been classified in the administrative assistant series. The survey did not affect the entry-level, two-tiered legal assistant series.

The State had concluded that many of the specifications originally developed in the late 1960's for legal support positions did not reflect the increased skill and complexity of the duties currently being performed by some of its staff. The term "paralegal" was chosen as the classification title for objective and advanced level positions which independently performed specialized and complex legal research and analysis, drafted correspondingly sophisticated legal pleadings, as well as other activities in the delivery of legal services that would otherwise be performed by licensed attorneys. The specifications for the paralegal series included limited supervision by an attorney but specifically excluded the performance of clerical and routine tasks typically performed by legal secretaries or legal assistants for a majority of the time. While employees in existing positions were subsequently classified as paralegals, future applicants for paralegal position would require successful completion of civil service testing specific to the paralegal profession.

The committee met formally on October 30, 1996, with a view to preparing definition and that would meet with the approval of at least a majority of the committee. After considerable deliberation, a definition was proposed with the caveat that there would need to be a "grandfather clause" with a sunset provision. The purpose of the "grandfather clause" was to permit licensure of those experienced individuals who would qualify as Paralegals without having to take the required educational program to be established and recommended for future Paralegals.

The critical elements within the definition were that the individual was 1) qualified through education, training or work experience was 2) supervised by a licensed Wisconsin attorney; and was 3) capable of performing certain legal work that otherwise would have been performed by an attorney. The "grandfather clause" would ultimately allow for the deletion of the words "work experience".

The major hurdle in obtaining and drafting a definition for "Paralegal" was whether that definition included "... supervised by an attorney ..." There was a difference of opinion within the Paralegal members of the Task Force. There was almost an even split between those who wanted the definition to include "... supervised by an attorney ..." and those who wanted it left out. A lesser obstacle, but also discussed at some length, was whether or not the Paralegal could work independently for an out-of-state attorney. Again, there was about an even split between the Paralegals supporting independence and those arguing that an attorney licensed in Wisconsin should still be supervising the Wisconsin licensed Paralegal. After considerable debate, the proposal finally voted on by the committee included the language requiring the supervision by a Wisconsin attorney.

The definition, as proposed by the committee was adopted by a 3-1 vote with one committee member, a Paralegal, dissenting. The dissenting Paralegal proposed a definition as a minority report to the Paralegal Task Force

Both at the committee level and again at the Task Force Committee level a provision for "specialty" Paralegals was discussed. In both instances, the majority believed it was premature to provide for "specialty" categories. If the program recommended by the Task Force is implemented it is foreseeable "specialty" areas of Paralegal work may evolve. A clear majority of the Task Force considers it presently is inappropriate to define areas of "specialty" for Paralegals.

The definition committee's majority and minority reports were presented to a regular meeting of the Paralegal Task Force. Again, the Task Force members had an opportunity to review the proposed definition and "grandfather clause" in advance. All of the elements felt to be critical by the committee were again discussed at length, with particular attention to the issue of Paralegal supervision by a Wisconsin attorney.

There was general discussion on each of the other elements by the Task Force. After considerable deliberation on the part of the entire Task Force, the preceding definition was adopted with two dissenting votes.

Subsection (2) regulates the use of the title "paralegal." The proposed rules do not seek to require the licensure of any individual employed or supervised by a lawyer whose duties fall within the definition contained in subsection (1). Rather, the proposed rules require licensure of individuals whose duties fall within the definition of subsection (1), and who propose to be known as "paralegals."

For example, a person whose job duties fall within subsection (1), but is referred to as a “legal nurse consultant” or “legal assistant” or “legal secretary” is not required to obtain or hold a paralegal license.

SCR __.02 Education and Training Required for Licensure

(a) Except as provided in SCR __.03, no individual may be licensed as a paralegal in this state unless that individual has successfully completed post-secondary education and training that includes either of the following:

(1) An associates degree or bachelors degree from a qualified paralegal studies program; or

(2) a. An associates degree or bachelors degree in any discipline from any institution of post-secondary education which is accredited by an accrediting body recognized by the United States Department of Education; and

b. Not less than 18 semester credits of coursework offered by a qualified paralegal studies program with a minimum grade of "C" in each course, any portion of which may be a part of or in addition to the credits earned toward the foregoing degree, in the following areas:

1. 3 semester credits in legal research;
2. 3 semester credits in legal writing;
3. 1 semester credit in legal ethics;
4. 1 semester credit in Wisconsin litigation practice;
5. 6 semester credits in specific areas of substantive law;
6. Not less than 4 semester credits in any of the areas specified in subs. 1-5 of this subparagraph.

(b) In this chapter, "qualified paralegal studies program" means a program of paralegal or legal assistant studies offered by an institution of post-secondary education which maintains a 2-year or 4-year program of paralegal or legal assistant studies that is sanctioned by the Wisconsin Technical College System Board, is sanctioned by the Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin System, is approved by the House of Delegates of the American Bar Association, or which is an institutional member of the American Association for Paralegal Education.

(c) In this chapter, "semester credit" means a minimum of 14 clock hours of classroom instruction in a qualified paralegal studies program.

(d) Coursework offered by an institution of post-secondary education as part of a Juris Doctorate program that is approved by the American Bar Association may substitute for the coursework specified in sec. (a)(2)(b) of this section so long as:

- (1) not less than 18 semester credits of coursework is completed with a minimum grade of "C" in each course;
- (2) the content of the coursework meets the categorical criteria specified in sec. (a)(2)(b) of this section; and
- (3) any coursework or combination of coursework submitted in satisfaction of the litigation or substantive law criteria of sec. (a)(2)(b) of this section includes instruction in the proper drafting of legal documents used regularly in that area of the law."

COMMENTARY

Paralegal professional organizations have long recognized that education should be a component of entry into the profession. While nationally there has been debate as to how the education will be validated, such as through testing or the completion of a degree program, the committee has agreed that in Wisconsin a standard course of study should be required of all Paralegals.

The requirement should be two-fold: (1) Minimum requirements for entry into the profession, and (2) continuing education requirements for continued licensing.

To develop educational standards, the Task Force looked to various standard-setting organizations, namely, the National Association of Legal Assistants, the National Federation of Paralegal Associations, the American Association for Paralegal Education, and the American Bar Association. Since the ABA possesses national recognition as setting the standard for quality Paralegal education, the Task Force looked to ABA standards in developing educational standards for Paralegals licensed in Wisconsin.

The Task Force concluded, however, that requiring graduation from an ABA-approved program could be detrimental to the profession since it might stifle the development of new Paralegal programs within the state. A program must be in existence a minimum of two years before applying for ABA approval. Instead, the Task Force analyzed the ABA guidelines and adopted the ABA's standard of a minimum of 18 credits of Paralegal course work. While the ABA does not specify which courses should be required, the Task Force recognized that preparation for the profession involves more than technical competency. Therefore, the Task Force set specific course standards that would help ensure the development of skills such as writing, critical thinking, and recognition of ethical issues. The Task Force accordingly recommended that course work include legal research, legal writing, Wisconsin litigation practice, and ethics. At the same time, the Task Force recognized the need for development of skills related to specific areas of law. Thus, the Task Force included a requirement that six credits be in specific areas of law practice. The Task Force concluded that litigation is important to all areas of law to ensure that graduates from non-Wisconsin programs are knowledgeable about Wisconsin litigation procedures, the litigation requirement is state-specific. One credit was considered sufficient since those Paralegals would be able to transfer the litigation fundamentals they learned into a setting outside Wisconsin.

While many large metropolitan-area law firms seek Paralegals with a four-year degree, the Task Force recognized that the majority of Wisconsin law firms are sole or small practices, which consider a four-year degree to be an extravagance. The Task Force saw nothing that suggests a two-year associate's degree provides an inappropriate educational background for Paralegals.

The American Association for Paralegal Education (AAfPE) is a national organization of Paralegal educators. To be a member, the program must be in "substantial compliance" with the ABA guidelines. Since Wisconsin will undoubtedly see Paralegals who have been educated out of state, and since the school may not be ABA approved, the AAfPE membership would serve as a guide for determining the quality of the program. AAfPE is well recognized among Paralegal educators. Some schools are members of AAfPE, some are ABA approved, and some are both. In the judgment of the Task Force, poor quality schools are not allowed membership into AAfPE, and they are unable to earn ABA approval.

In response to an inquiry made during the initial review of the draft report by the Board of Governors, the Task Force has added subsection (d). This new subsection permits an individual to use coursework completed at an ABA-approved law school to meet the educational criteria specified by SCR__.02.

Associations and institutions which approve and sanction paralegal education in the United States mandate paralegal courses to include instruction in the proper preparation of legal documents. As such, it is essential that law school coursework used to satisfy the litigation and substantive law criteria of SCR__.02 also include instruction in the preparation of forms used regularly in those areas of the law.

Task Force believes that, in some cases, a combination of two law school courses such as a theoretical course in "Trusts and Estates" or "Civil Litigation" together with an applications course such as "General Practice" will serve as the functional equivalent of a paralegal course in litigation or a substantive area of the law. Accordingly, sec. (d)(3) is drafted to permit combinations of law school courses to satisfy the criteria specified in sec. (a)(2)(b).

SCR __.03. Licensure Based Upon Experience

(1) In addition to those who qualify to be licensed under SCR__.02, an individual is eligible to be licensed as a paralegal in Wisconsin if that individual meets all of the following qualifications:

(a) The individual has a high school diploma or equivalent education at the time of application.

(b) The individual has been engaged in work as a paralegal for not less than 4800 hours at any time during the 5 years immediately preceding the time of application.

(c) The individual has completed at least 3 hours of approved continuing paralegal education or continuing legal education in the area of legal ethics and professional responsibility during the 12 months preceding the time of application.

(d) The individual makes application for licensure under this section within 3 years after the effective date of this chapter.

(2) The work experience required under sec. (1)(b) of this section shall be documented by the certification of the attorney or attorneys under whose supervision the work was performed, or by records of a regularly conducted activity. The form and content of the certification shall be prescribed by the licensing agency.

COMMENTARY

SCR _ .03 is referred to as the “grandfather clause” in various portions of the Task Force report.

Age/High School

Originally a minimum age limit of 21 was proposed. The Task Force concluded it was necessary that, in addition to the 4,800 hours of work experience, the person have at least a high school education or its equivalent in order to knowledgeably perform paralegal duties. Since education and experience were agreed to be primary requirements for “grandfathering”, the age limit was eliminated as redundant.

Standard of Experience

The Task Force settled on a standard of work experience that would be longer than a two-year associate’s degree. An hourly measure was adopted to give fair consideration to both full-time and part-time employment. The 4,800 standard is equivalent to 3 years of experience at an average of 32 hours per week and 50 workweeks per year. A 5-year “window” prior to application was chosen to recognize part-time employment and the possibility of leaves of absence.

Work Certification

Two routes for documentation of work experience are provided. The first allows a supervising attorney to certify that the requisite work, or some portion of it, was performed. The second permits records of a regularly conducted activity (as the concept is understood in the Wisconsin Rules of Evidence) to be utilized.

Competency Testing

The possibility of a formal examination process, conducted by the licensing agency, was discussed at length by the Task Force and was rejected. There are inherent problems in implementation because of the diversity of law specialties and the cost of creation of such an exam. Discussions noted the types of exams that are available now. The National Federation of Paralegal Associations and National Association of Legal Assistants have examinations, which the Task Force views as overly extensive and costly. The national exams also would have no state-specific questions. A Task Force member reported that the American Association of Paralegal Educators looked at entry level exams but has decided against them at this time

The State of Wisconsin Department of Justice does have a civil service exam that could be adapted to test competency. It was the consensus of the Task Force that the Department of Justice exam, already administered as an evaluation of paralegal competency on a statewide level, might be the springboard for future licensure testing. Adaptation of that examination is not recommended at present.

Additional Course Requirements

Extensive time was spent discussing educational programs and whether post-secondary education requirements should be established within the Grandfather Clause. A “crash course” of ABA programs was posited as a potential route for gaining 30-40 credit hours of classroom study. It was thought that if a bar was to be set in the education requirement, it should be addressed in the experience level as well. Opposition to this idea came from the notion that many experienced Paralegals would be unwilling to expend the money or time to obtain the additional education and would simply drop the title of Paralegal. Additionally the Task Force concluded that employers would be unwilling to expend the projected sums of money to obtain this education for their already-employed and experienced Paralegals. This conclusion was based on a statewide survey of Paralegals covering numerous questions on licensure cost.

Ethics Requirement

To help assure that grandfathered Paralegals are current on ethics, the Task Force concluded it was desirable to require 3 ethics credits be taken prior to submission of the application. The ethics education requirement is equivalent to that for attorneys in Wisconsin. Classes are currently provided by the State Bar, Paralegal Associations and the Legal Seminar Industry to give ample opportunity for Paralegals across the state to obtain the credits.

Limited Timeframe

The Task Force concluded the grandfather option should be available to Paralegals who are currently in the field. Availability of an open-ended option was viewed as a disincentive to formal Paralegal education. A 3-year window of opportunity was selected as an appropriate length of time in which to make the paralegal industry aware of the requirement to allow for the 3 ethics credits to be taken and to process all the applications.

Special Circumstances B Licensing Agency Authority

Discussions by the Task Force also touched on a “Special Certification”. There was a concern regarding people hired with special training, i.e. nurse, tax accountant that have been used in the capacity of a Paralegal. The thought was that a Special Certification would come from an employing, duly-licensed Wisconsin lawyer as to the use of the applicant’s special expertise. Special Certifications would have been provided on a case by case basis to professionals whose former, verifiable educational degrees are in areas of expertise specifically suited to the attorney’s law practice. Special Certifications would be valid for the duration of employment with the supervising attorney only. This portion of the licensure would be open-ended. It would provide attorneys options that regularly hire nurses/tax accountantσ etc. into their practice. Additional requirements were formulated and then discarded due to the complexity of scenarios that could fall under “special certification”. It was felt that if someone is being used as a Paralegal they should meet the requirements. It would be nearly impossible to create a criterion that would meet the number of individual possibilities.

SCR __.04 Continuing Education Requirement

(a) No individual may maintain a license as a paralegal in this state unless that individual does either of the following:

(1) Completes at least 10 hours of approved continuing paralegal education or continuing legal education during each reporting period, a minimum of 2 hours of which shall be in the area of legal ethics and professional responsibility; or

(2) Successfully completes with a minimum grade of "C" at least 1 semester credit from a qualified paralegal studies program during each reporting period.

(b) "Reporting period" means the 2-year period during which a paralegal must satisfy the Wisconsin continuing paralegal education requirement of this section. The reporting period for a paralegal licensed in an even-numbered year shall end on December 31 of each even-numbered year following the year in which the paralegal was licensed initially. The reporting period for a paralegal licensed in an odd-numbered year shall end on the December 31 of each odd-numbered year following the year in which the paralegal was licensed initially.

(c) "Hour" means a period of approved continuing paralegal education or continuing legal education consisting of not less than 50 minutes.

COMMENTARY

To determine the educational requirements for continued licensing, the Task Force examined the continuing education requirements for attorneys licensed to practice in Wisconsin.

The Task Force recognized that attorneys, with their greater responsibilities and their (presumed) greater ability to pay for continuing education, should have more extensive continuing legal education requirements than Paralegals. After much debate, the Task Force adopted the standard of 10 continuing Paralegal education credits per two-year reporting period. This requirement would enable Paralegals to obtain the credits by yearly attending a one-day training.

To provide the greatest amount of flexibility for Paralegals to obtain continuing education relevant to their careers, the Task Force provided three methods for achieving the required hours: (1) continuing Paralegal education credits (2) continuing legal education credits, and (3) Paralegal course work. In addition, there is a requirement for continued training in ethics and professional responsibility.

The Task Force recognized that there is a concern regarding accessibility of continuing education for Paralegals who live in remote locations. Therefore, the Task Force recommends that the State Bar of Wisconsin work with the Wisconsin Technical College System to utilize the distance education technology of the Wisconsin Technical College Network to provide live interactive training at each of the Wisconsin Technical Colleges.

SCR __ .05 Ineligibility

No individual is eligible to be licensed as a paralegal in this state if any of the following conditions apply:

- (1) The individual's license to practice law in any state is under suspension or revocation.
- (2) The individual has been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude.
- (3) The individual lacks good moral character.

COMMENTARY

In March 1997 the Task Force formed a committee on standards and quality to consider the attributes which should be possessed by a person licensed as a Paralegal in Wisconsin. After extensive discussion the committee concluded that standards for licensure should be set in the following broad categories:

- General minimum requirements
- Education
- Training
- Work experience
- Continuing paralegal education

With the exception of the topic of general minimum requirements, the Task Force determined that each subject was of sufficient complexity (and in some cases of sufficient controversy) that separate committees should be constituted to study them and make recommendations.

The standards and quality committee initially recommended a minimum age requirement of 21 years. Subsequent deliberations refined the issue to call for an applicant for licensure to possess a high school diploma or equivalent plus 3 years of practice (in case of an application based on work experience) or a 2-year associates degree (in case of an application based on educational attainment).

The committee and the full Task Force concluded, for reasons considered self-evident, that a person licensed as a Paralegal should be of good moral character, utilizing the same understanding of the term as is used for attorneys.

Similarly, the committee and the full Task Force determined that Paralegal licensure should not be available to persons who had been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude. While licensed Paralegals will work under the supervision of attorneys under the regulatory scheme proposed by the Task Force, public trust and confidence in the honesty and fidelity of Paralegals is a paramount consideration.

Finally, both the committee and the Task Force concluded, and strongly recommend, that Paralegal licensure not be available to persons whose licenses to practice law are under revocation or suspension. The Paralegal rules of ethics promulgated by the Task Force closely parallel the rules of professional conduct for attorneys. The Task Force believes persons under professional discipline for failure to adhere to similar if not identical standards of conduct should not have recourse to Paralegal licensure as a temporary career expedient.

SCR __: 1 Rules of Ethics

Preamble: A Paralegal's Responsibility

A paralegal is an individual qualified through education and training, employed or retained to perform substantive legal work, supervised by an attorney licensed to practice law in this state, requiring a sufficient knowledge of legal concepts that, absent the paralegal, the attorney would perform the work.

As an integral partner in the delivery of legal services, the paralegal has a special responsibility for the quality of justice provided. The paralegal through his/her work with the supervising attorney seeks a result that is advantageous to the client but consistent with the requirements of honest dealings with others.

In all professional functions a paralegal should be competent, prompt and diligent. A paralegal should, whenever possible, assist in the communication with a client concerning the representation. A paralegal should keep in confidence information relating to representation of a client except as far as disclosure is required or permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.

A paralegal's conduct should conform to the requirements of the law, both in professional service to clients and in the paralegal's employment and personal affairs. A paralegal should use the law's procedures only for legitimate purposes and not to harass or intimidate others. A paralegal should demonstrate respect for the legal system and for those who serve it, including attorneys, judges and public officials. While it is a paralegal's duty, as a private citizen, when necessary to challenge the rectitude of official action, it is also the paralegal's duty to uphold the legal process.

As a public citizen, a paralegal should seek improvement of the law, the administration of justice and the quality of service rendered by the legal profession. As a member of a licensed profession, a paralegal should cultivate knowledge in reform of the law and work to strengthen legal education. A paralegal should possess integrity, professional skill and dedication to the improvement of the legal system and should strive to enhance the paralegal role in the delivery of legal services. A paralegal should be mindful of deficiencies in the administration of justice and of the fact that the poor, and sometimes persons who are not poor, cannot afford adequate legal assistance, and should therefore devote professional time and civic influence in their behalf. A paralegal should aid the legal profession in pursuing these objectives.

Many of the paralegal's professional responsibilities are prescribed in the Rules of Professional Conduct, as well as in substantive and procedural law. However, a paralegal is also guided by personal conscience and the approbation of professional peers. A paralegal should strive to attain the highest level of skill, to improve the law and the legal profession and to exemplify the legal profession's ideals of public service.

In the nature of law practice, however, conflicting responsibilities are encountered. A paralegal shall act within the bounds of the law, solely for the benefit of the client, and shall be free of compromising influences and loyalties. Neither the paralegal's personal or business interest, nor those of other clients or third persons, should compromise the paralegal's professional judgement and loyalty to the client. The Rules of Professional Conduct prescribe terms for resolving such conflicts. Within the framework of these rules many difficult issues of professional discretion can arise. Such issues must be resolved through the exercise of sensitive professional and moral judgment guided by the basic principles underlying the rules.

Scope

The Rules of Professional Conduct are rules of reason. They should be interpreted with reference to the purposes of assisting in legal representation and of the law itself. Some of the rules are imperatives; cast in the terms of "shall" or "shall not". These define proper conduct for purposes of professional discipline. Others, generally cast in the term "may", are permissive and define areas under the rules in which the paralegal has professional discretion. No disciplinary action should be taken when the paralegal chooses not to act or acts within the bounds of such discretion. Other rules define the nature of relationships between the paralegal and others. The rules are thus partly obligatory and disciplinary and partly constitutive and descriptive in that they define a paralegal's professional role.

Furthermore, for purposes of determining the paralegal's role in relationship to an attorney's authority and responsibility, principles of substantive law external to these rules determine whether a client-attorney-paralegal relationship exists.

Failure to comply with an obligation or prohibition imposed by a rule is a basis for invoking the disciplinary process. The rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a paralegal's conduct will be made on the basis of the facts and circumstances as they existed at the time of the conduct in question and in recognition of the fact that a paralegal often has to act upon uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation. Moreover, the rules presuppose that whether or not discipline should be imposed by a violation, and the severity of a sanction, depend on the circumstances, such as the willfulness and seriousness of the violation, extenuating factors and whether there have been previous violations.

Violation of a rule should not give rise to a cause of action nor should it create any presumption that a legal duty has been breached. The rules are designed to provide guidance to paralegals and to provide a structure for regulating conduct through disciplinary agencies. They are not designed to be a basis for civil liability. Furthermore, the purpose of the rules can be subverted when they are invoked by opposing parties as procedural weapons. The fact that a rule is a just basis for a paralegal's self-assessment, or for sanctioning a paralegal under the administration of a disciplinary authority, does not imply that an antagonist in a collateral proceeding or transaction has standing to seek enforcement of the rule. Accordingly, nothing in the rules should be deemed to augment any substantive legal duty of paralegals or the extra-disciplinary consequences of violating such duty.

COMMENTARY

For many years attorneys have been regulated in the practice of law by a comprehensive set of rules found generally in SCR Chapter 20 as administered by the Board of Attorneys Professional Responsibility. The work of the Task Force has been to investigate and make recommendations to the Board of Governors on what role paralegals can and should play in the daily practice of law. As this group of professionals is given and accepts greater responsibility in serving the legal needs of the client, recognition must be given to the need for rules governing the ethical responsibility of the paralegal. Relaxation of the oversight and control by a supervising attorney requires the promulgation of a comprehensive set of rules, similar to those applied to attorneys that regulate the paralegals' profession and serve to protect the public.

Preceding this commentary is a set of rules that regulate the paralegal profession and ensures that such practice protects and serves the client. The starting point for these new rules has been the Attorneys' Rules of Professional Conduct. The preceding rules follow the attorneys' rules and deviate for nomenclature, to remove inapplicable rules, and to recognize that paralegals ultimately work under the supervision and direction of an attorney licensed to practice law in this State.

First and foremost in the drafting of these proposed rules is the recognition that a paralegal will at all times operate under the supervision of an attorney. These rules are not meant to endow the paralegal with an independent right to practice law. The language "in consultation with an attorney" reiterates this point repeatedly throughout the draft rules.

The Task Force also recognized that working "in consultation with an attorney" could have various meanings. "Consultation", as that term has been used by the Task Force, is meant to require the paralegal to obtain the knowledgeable consent or approval of the attorney for whom he or she is working. This approval and consent can be made only in a close professional relationship between the paralegal and attorney. This consultation and the ensuing discussion should be made with respect to each significant decision that is made. These rules do not sanction a situation in which the attorney gives the paralegal a blanket approval which may allow the paralegal to in effect work unsupervised.

Additionally, the Task Force chose to delete the word "representation" which was contained in the attorney's rules, from the draft paralegal rules. In its place the Task Force has used the word "assistance". Again, the Task Force felt the paralegal, by working under the supervision of an attorney, does not so much "represent" the client, but "assists" the attorney in his or her representation of the client. These rules are not meant to give paralegals a license to practice law nor to represent clients with respect to their legal problems.
